CONSTITUTIONAL POLITICS IN THE EUROPEAN UNION

PALGRAVE STUDIES IN EUROPEAN UNION POLITICS covers all topics of significance concerning the nature and operation of the European Union. It includes contributions from a range of disciplines to reflect the growing importance of the EU as a political and social phenomenon at the domestic and international level.

Constitutional Politics in the European Union examines the 'Convention on the Future of Europe' and its impact on the process of European constitutionalization. The Convention's efforts, however, have not yet materialised into a Constitution. So, this was a Convention without a Constitution. Does it matter? The purpose of this book is to show that it may not, or at least not in the sense that many think. It is one of the central contentions of this book that the Convention itself – how it operated and what it represented – is an important 'moment' in the open-ended and contested process of creating a stable constitutional order in the EU. Although the Convention did not result in a constitution, it succeeded in opening up a public constitutional debate; a debate which may contribute to determine the future of the European Union.

Dario Castiglione teaches Political Theory at the University of Exeter, UK. His publications comprise co-edited volumes on The Culture of Tolerance in Diverse Societies (2003), Making European Citizens (2006), and The Language Question in Europe and Diverse Societies (2007).

Justus Schönlau is Honorary Research Fellow at the University of Exeter, UK. His publications include Drafting the EU Charter (2005), as well as articles on the Charter and Constitutional Conventions, on fundamental rights in the EU and European political parties in journals and edited volumes.
